

A research and capacity building project in partnership with Microsoft to improve hybrid teaching practices in higher education.

The brief.

Education Changemakers was approached by Microsoft to provide research and professional development content to support higher education lecturers to improve their understanding and application of hybrid learning.

What we did.

We brought together a team of higher education lecturers, hybrid learning experts, technology trainers and adult learning facilitators to research and analyse best-practice approaches to hybrid and remote learning. Based on these findings we then built out a series of toolkits, webinars and research reports that could be shared across the higher education sector. This suite of materials has since been turned into a sustainable training calendar for the sector.

14

days from project briefing to the completion of all training materials.

125+

pages of research and resources across the training guides.